

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A control system for use in controlling actuation of tools in a subterranean 5 well. In a described embodiment, a control system includes a well tool, an actuator for the well tool and a control module interconnected between the actuator and first and second fluid lines. The control module is operative to meter a predetermined volume of fluid from the actuator to the second line in response to pressure applied to the first line.